Dear Sir,

I'm an undergraduate student at the department of Biotechnology, University of Kazan in Russia. With this letter I would like to express my interest and motivation in participating in the Rips summer internship. Our world and way of life depends on the product of modern-day science. Sustainable power, renewable energy, electric vehicles, advanced engineering, commercial space travel and medicine will all rely on an increased source of the materials we already depend on. Like all technologies, biotechnology offers the potential of enormous benefit but also potential risks, biotechnology could help address many global problems such as climate change, an aging society, food security and energy security while preserving resources. Biotechnology remains the future of science and there is a great need to pay a closer attention to this industry. Since I was young, I have always been enthusiastic and passionate about this field. My interest in this field inspired me to pursue studies under this path which has greatly enhanced my ability to not only understand the rudiments of this sector but also realize the importance of this field in supporting the growth and development of society.

As a young person with deep love for learning and research, I have continued to improve myself through active participation on various platforms. Through my passion for science and bio-technology. I have an undying interest in computer technology, while growing up computers have always fascinated me, in order to satisfy my curiosity, I have resorted to studying more about computers which sparked my interest even more. I'm a programmer and software development while currently taking a course on game development.

As a person who believes in community "Ubuntu" I am because we are. I have been part of community services both offline and online, my way of building a better society.

Apart from the above, I have a keen interest in sports and enjoy playing football and most importantly spending time with loved ones.

In writing this, I cannot over emphasize the importance of this internship to me. Not forgetting that Japan is one of the leading nations in science and technology. I'm convinced that this summer internship will be a great experience, allowing me to gain new knowledge, establish meaningful friendships, experience Us and her new culture.

Sincerely,

Aninwezi Emmanuel
